So you're looking for something to give your sex life a shot in the arm? How about a shot in the spot that gets the party started?

booming - vaginal rejuvenation and augmentation - technologies that promise to enhance bedtime frolicking.

Have I gotten your attention yet?

While men have been able to pop a blue pill to play wildly in bed, women have had to undergo the knife with a cut and slice scenario for a tighter, closer, or snugger nether region. Yikes! Is the pain worth the gain?

The latest in this juicy segment of belowthe-waist enhancement is called the G-Shot done rather simply and without surgery. The G-Shot is a collagen shot administered to the G-Spot and is done in the doctor's "During my spinning class I have this smile Dr. Donald DeBrakeleer, exam room. certified Ob-Gyn. "I try to counsel women in my practice about orgasms. Most women understand the differences between orgasms." He is quick to point out, "A woman who does not have vaginally stimulated orgasms will not benefit from the shot." Both doctors admit, however, that about 13 percent who do get the shot do not feel any enhancement whatsoever.

Before receiving the shot, a patient must undergo a consultation with her doctor. Then after signing the usual consent forms, she is left alone in the exam room to find her G-Spot (I'll leave that part to your imagination.) A local anesthetic is injected continued on page 13 and then the collagen is administered. Total injection time is about 8 - 10 minutes. The results are immediate.

Initial thoughts suggest this shot would be popular with the loose and panty-free crowd, the Lindsays and Parises. Not so, says Dr. Smith. "There are some younger women coming in, but most are not." He says that most of his patients are married, between the ages of 35 and 50. Dr. DeBrakeleer agrees that most of his patients tend to be older - in their 30's and 40's.

But not everyone thinks jabbing needles into private parts is such a great idea. Dr. Christopher Fariello is a sex therapist at the Institute for Sex Therapy in Philadelphia. He worries that this is another device being marketed to the wrong people.

"Obviously, people want to have or create more pleasure in their sex lives, whether it be breast enlargement or any augmentation. The G-Shot is another opportunity for people to gain pleasure," says Dr. Fariello. "But, in fact, my business increased after Viagra came out because people thought this would help (their sex lives.) But it didn't. So, their doctors told them to see a therapist. I usually encourage people to work with what they have before doing anything, because this is your body."

But for those who believe in the results, or are at least willing to take a shot at it, the procedure is said to enhance your G-Spot for about four months at a cost averaging $1,800. The next procedure can be done quicker because all the measurements are maintained in your medical file. Clearly, some women are pleased with their new level of sexuality and want more.

"I do have repeat customers," says Dr. Smith. "They are very satisfied." Q
